1. Context

Over two million pets live in Switzerland. Behind each one is an owner who, sooner or later, needs to book a vet appointment — and in the vast majority of cases still does so by phone. For veterinary practices, this creates daily structural pressure: overwhelmed front desks, under-exploited time slots, staff handling admin instead of caring for patients. A paradox in 2026.

“A vet should not be less accessible than a restaurant. In 2026, booking an appointment for your pet in thirty seconds should be standard — even at midnight.”

Ludovic Picard, founder of OneClic.vet

OneClic.vet brings to the veterinary sector what Onedoc brought to doctors and therapists: a clear, reliable digital infrastructure that respects the independence of professionals.

2. The solution

A Swiss veterinary directory

OneClic.vet lists active veterinary practices in French-speaking Switzerland, with national expansion underway. Each profile centralises contact details, location and useful information for pet owners.

24/7 appointment booking

Partner practices activate online booking on their profile. Pet owners check real-time availability and book without a phone call — at any hour.

Full control retained by the practice

- The vet sets available slots and bookable consultation types
  - No appointment is imposed
  - No commission on medical acts
  - No medical advice provided by the platform
  - Practice–client relationship unchanged
  - Data hosted in Switzerland — nFADP compliant
